Film: A bare room, a couple of windows on the right, door above in the center; perhaps a glimpse of a porch outside. It is a cold, bare, fall day; silvery yellow light. The camera moves slowly left past the windows, past the door. Now we see a guy rummaging through an old wooden desk on the left: he is eager to find something which he seems sure is there. He is talking to someone behind the camera or on the right-hand side of the room, whom we never see. The camera now moves slowly back toward the door, stops, and then the cluster of blue thistles slowly begins to appear as a superimposed image. As the camera continues to point at the door, we hear the voice of the guy at the desk, who has clearly found what he was looking for, saying, "...Here's 7, here's 6...~!"
